

Environmental Statement

In line with the company commitment to the environment, Fuchs Lubritech (UK) Ltd. publishes an annual statement relating to environmental performance.

This statement is available to all interested parties, including but not restricted to customers, suppliers, employees, members of the local community and employees of neighbouring companies.

Environmental Statement relating to activities September 2007 – August 2008.
Issued by Mr. H. Vithlani, Managing Director, Fuchs Lubritech (UK) Limited.

The company's Management System, which meets the requirements of ISO 9001 & ISO 14001, has been adequately maintained during this period. Our continuing certification was confirmed during scheduled surveillance visits by representatives of Lloyds Register of Quality Assurance (LRQA).

Fuchs Lubritech (UK) Ltd has continued its quest to reduce the impact of its activities on the environment.

To achieve continual improvement the company continues to identify areas of operation, which could potentially have an effect on the environment.

The management programme team continues to investigate cost effective methods of reducing the impacts to the environment. The primary objective remains to reduce waste in all forms and increase utilisation of plant, equipment and wherever possible reduce the inputs into the operation.

In addition to the above programmes, the operation has been subjected to detailed review to ensure that any potential environmental incidents have been considered and means of minimising their effect have been documented and communicated to all employees.

Objectives for the continuous improvement of the activities have been set and are regularly monitored, and our achievement against these objectives has shown a reduction in water and gas consumption against an increase in products manufactured and distributed from our site.

Should you have any queries or comments relating to our environmental management system, please direct them to either myself, or the company's environmental representative at the address below.
